This Month's Knot

Arbor Knot

Nine Steps

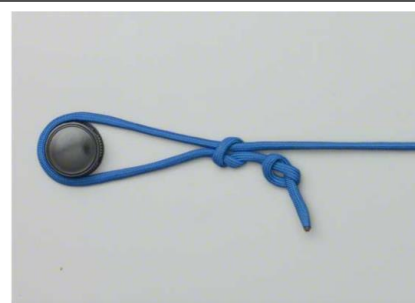

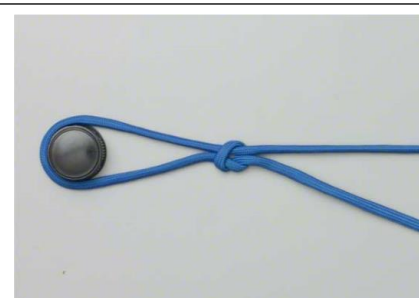

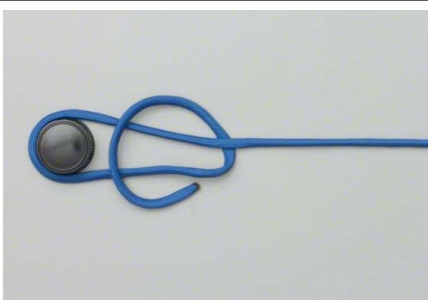

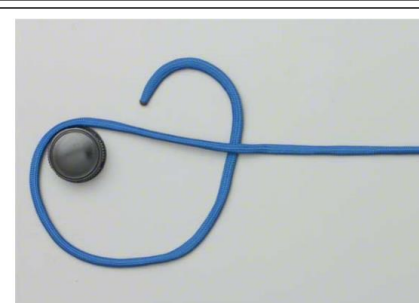

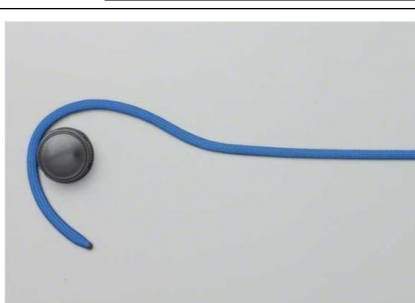

Pass the fishing line round the arbor. With the free end, tie an overhand knot around the line. Then tie a second overhand knot in the free end to act as a stopper. Finally, slide the knots down tight against the arbor.

Uses: The Arbor Knot is used to attach the fishing line to the "Arbor" or "Spool Center". In fact the Arbor Knot is really based on a noose knot and, therefore, pulling tightens it.

Tying it: When the Arbor is accessible, the easiest way to tie the Arbor knot is to create a Noose, drop it on the Arbor and pull it to tighten it. If you make a Slip Knot by mistake it will just pull undone. Alternatively, as shown in the animation, pass the tag end around the Arbor and use the end to tie an overhand knot around the line.

The overhand knot in the tag end is essential. As the knot is tightened it snugs down against the Arbor. Some fishermen recommend winding the loop twice round the Arbor before making the first half hitch. This increases the friction which may be useful on some of the more polished reels.

Advantages: The Arbor knot is simple, easily learned and effective.

Our Speaker – Russell Willoughby

Fresh Water News

Russell and I went to Lake Smith hoping that the water would be warm enough to turn-on the crappie bite but that didn't happen. 43.5 degrees didn't do it. But, it was a beautiful day with low winds and warm sun. The bass Russell and I brought in were 1.82 pounds the biggest of the two seventeen inches. Bait was live medium shiners. Ice was still in shallow coves with no sunlight. But it was great getting out.
